

Call for Coleman Prize 2013 Association of Business Historians

To be awarded at the ABH Annual Conference, 28-29 June, 2013
Lancashire Business School and the
Lancashire Institute for Economic and Business Research, UK

The Association of Business Historians invites submissions for consideration for the 2013 Coleman Prize. This prestigious prize is open to PhD dissertations in Business History either having a British subject or completed at a British University. All dissertations completed in the calendar years 2011 and 2012 are eligible (with the exception of previous submissions). The value of the prize is £250. Named in honour of the British Business Historian Donald Coleman, this prize is awarded annually by the Association of Business Historians to recognise excellence in new research in Britain. The Prize is sponsored by the Taylor & Francis Group, a scholarly publisher which makes available original manuscript collections, rare printed books and other primary source materials in microform and electronic format. It is a condition of eligibility for the Prize that short-listed finalists present their findings at the Association's annual conference, to be held at the Lancashire Business School, Preston, UK. For more information see <http://www.gla.ac.uk/external/ABH>.

Please send a pdf document, including the title of your PhD dissertation and a brief 300 word abstract to Dr Aashish Velkar by 28 February 2013. A long-list of candidates will be requested to send hard copies of their thesis to us by 31 March 2013, from which a shortlist of finalists will be chosen.
